

Celebrate Earth Day with the Green Classroom Challenge

The California Academy of Sciences, PG&E and the San Francisco Giants have teamed up to support schools that are trying to “green up their act.” Join the Green Classroom Challenge. The winning class will receive FREE tickets and participate in a home plate ceremony at AT&T Park, prior to the Giants vs. St. Louis Cardinals game on Sunday, April 25, in celebration of Earth Day 2010.

The classroom with the winning project will:

- » Win tickets to attend the Earth Day game* at AT&T Park
- » Have an opportunity to go on the field before the game
- » Have their project featured on the HD scoreboard
- » Meet an Academy scientist!

All K-8 classes in San Francisco County are welcome to participate. Green your classroom in February and March for a chance to win, as project submissions are due April 2, 2010.

For details on how to participate, and full rules and terms, visit

www.calacademy.org/teachers/earthdaychallenge

*All students, teachers and one chaperone per child will receive tickets to the Sunday 4/25 1:05pm game. Tickets are non-transferable and have no value. All submissions will be judged and awarded by 4/12 and winners will be notified by 4/13. All entries will be considered equally. Submissions become the property of the California Academy of Sciences and will not be returned. All costs and expenses incurred by entering this contest are the sole responsibility of the participants and will not be reimbursed. Releases will be required prior to any public broadcast or display of winning individuals or participants.

The Green Classroom Challenge is sponsored and judged by the California Academy of Sciences, PG&E, and the San Francisco Giants.